Seek Property Protection.

V. R. Stiles opened the meeting by saying, "Now that these Spanish refugees have safely got out of Chihuahua and their lives have been spared, they are coming to think of their homes and property in Chihuahua, and so have come to us to ask our assistance as business men in securing from our government the protection by the American consul at Chihuahua for their property."

Mr. Burges questioned the refugees closely in regard to the incidents connected with their expulsion from Chihuahua. In answer to his inquiries Eduardo de Angoitia, manager of the Banco Nacional de Mexico, in Chihuahua City, said, "We were ordered to leave on pain of our lives. The order was both written and verbal. The latter came through the English consul, Capt. Scobell. There is no Spanish consul in Chihuahua. He left in June to visit his children who were in school in Washington city, and when he returned the city was being bombed and he could not enter. We therefore wired our minister in Mexico City to place us under the protection of the British consul who has looked after our affairs ever since."

Consuls Petitioned Villa.

"When Capt. Scobell was notified by Villa that we were to be driven out of the country, he called into the German and American consuls, and all three petitioned Villa to reconsider the order. They suggested that we should stay in the city for a few days, but Villa extended five days, but that was all that they could do. The American consul tried to report the matter to his government in Washington with a cipher telegram. Villa sent the message back to him, saying, 'Send me a plain message, and I will tell you whether or no I will allow it to go through.' Many of us were eye witnesses when Villa was taken by force from the British consulate by Villa's men. We do not believe that the British consul was able to get any message through Villa's censors notifying his government of this event. The written order for our expulsion from Chihuahua was delivered to the transmitter of the train that brought us out. We have a copy of that order."

Order of Expulsion.

The copy reads as follows: "Constitutional army, provisional governor of the state of Chihuahua. 'It is hereby ordered, that a train, subject to the order of E. Moya, be prepared for the placing on board of all the federal troops who remain in the state of Chihuahua and the Spanish citizens which have been expelled from our city, all of them and their families. And it is hereby forbidden for any train to pass on this train.' The order was dated Dec. 19, and signed by Francisco Villa. A telegram in the name of Dr. H. Stevenson from the Red Cross authorities in Washington, authorizing Dr. Stevenson as head of the Red Cross society in El Paso to provide shelter and care for the destitute refugees. The telegram said that necessary funds for this purpose would be sent by the national society, and that a man would be sent by the national society to assist in the care of the refugees, this man to arrive in three or four days."

Refugees Not in Financial Straits. After expressing the gratitude of the refugees for the promptness of the Red Cross society, senior de Angoitia said that—thanks to the efforts of the chamber of commerce and the citizens of El Paso, they were not short of funds; that they were not short of funds as all the colonies had put their money in a common purse with a finance committee so that all would be cared for alike, whether or not they had been able to bring out money with them in their flight; that therefore they would not be dependent upon the charity of El Paso; that they had telegraphed to their friends and to the Spanish colonies in Guadalajara and other cities, and would be provided with funds by them. He said that the funds raised by the Spanish club of El Paso in Chihuahua, which it had been expected would be used for the rescue of a club house, were brought out of Chihuahua with them and would be used to care for the people here. This fund amounted to $100.

Mr. Stiles said: "We have been greatly impressed by the meeting of these refugees. It was very well managed and shows that they have selected good men to head their temporary organizations. We are also pleased with the way they are arranging to care for themselves." He then asked the advice of Mr. Burges in regard to the action of the chamber of commerce.

Mr. Burges said: "I think that the chamber of commerce should advise the department of state as to the exact number of men who have sought refuge here; of their abandoned property in Chihuahua, with no Spanish consul to protect it, entirely at the mercy of those who have ordered them out; and to advise if the government cannot take some step to have the property returned to the American consul or the associated foreign consuls in Chihuahua so that the property be not destroyed or confiscated. I think that this telegram should be sent to the state department, to our senators and to our representatives. I think that such a telegram would be effective. The Washington government is not apathetic, but does not see its way to protect the property of foreigners without resorting to means which it is bitterly reluctant to use."

Mr. Adams moved that such a telegram be drafted and sent immediately, and the committee was appointed. It drew up the telegram, reported to the board of directors, and sent it to Washington.

Before the meeting concluded, president Stiles offered the vacant office in the chamber of commerce building to the refugees for their headquarters.

Spanish Draft Protest.

The Spanish refugees met at the chamber of commerce Saturday afternoon to frame a formal protest against their treatment by Villa's rebels to express their appreciation of the treatment they had received in El Paso and to make plans for the future.

The Spanish merchants, business men and manufacturers made a good impression upon the El Paso business men who attended the meeting at their invitation. The session was dignified, devoid of class or race hatred and serious consideration given by the Spaniards of the situation in which they have been placed by the fortunes of war in Mexico.

Appreciate Aid by El Pasoans.

Eduardo Angoitia, recognized leader of the Spanish colony, made the principal address at the opening of the meeting. It was delivered in perfect Spanish and was delivered in perfect English. He expressed his appreciation of the friendly attitude of the Americans and an appeal to all the members of the department to do nothing while in El Paso that would bring discredit upon their country or their colony. Benito Martinez presided at the meeting and introduced to Angoitia, a Spanish speaker, the speaker told his countrymen briefly what had happened and what was going on in Chihuahua. He spoke in silence, smoking their cigarettes and paying the closest attention to every word their leader told them.

Cheers for Officials.

It was not until he proposed a cheer for Gen. Hugh L. Scott, later, immigration chief F. W. Berkshire and collector of customs Z. L. Cobb that the Spaniards broke into a cheer. They rose to their feet in answer to the question, in Spanish from the speaker, and answered "si" and stood for more than a minute when they cheered the army officials, the immigration and customs officials for their courtesies. This was repeated later in the meeting when the names of consul Marion Letcher, Capt. Scobell, the British vice consul, the chamber of commerce and the business men of El Paso who had aided them in their time of trouble, were mentioned.

Villa's Act "Barbarous."

Villa's act in driving them from the country, and confiscation of their property, was dismissed with a dignified statement that it was "savage and barbarous." "Senior Angoitia said that Capt. Scobell had been appealed to, but he had interfered for them with Villa, but rudely told that all Spaniards must leave the country and their goods be confiscated. If any remained they would be put to death, he told the British vice consul, who was acting as the Spanish consul. He said that all of the consuls had done everything possible for them and that it was deeply appreciated. "At another meeting Villa said, in the presence of more than 20 Spaniards, that they had always exploited the poor people and robbed them and in penalty of this he was going to order them out of the country. The Spaniards present had to stand for hours and insults addressed to them while he was talking. The stores and factories were occupied that same day by Villa's men and money demanded of many merchants," said Angoitia.

Guarantees Promised.

Vincent F. De La Retuera, speaking in English, gave a brief outline of events in Chihuahua for the benefit of the Americans present, including the directors of the chamber of commerce, who were given a list of the refugees. "We took the advice of the foreign colonies, of the consuls and others and remained in Chihuahua. When Villa, acting governor Francisco Moya asked us to go to a reception for Villa, which many of us did. We were ready to give money to his cause if it was needed, but we with others, asked that the flat money be not put into circulation as it meant bankruptcy for every business in Chihuahua."

Stores are Looted.

"After this meeting Villa gave a written guarantee to all, even the Chinese, but excepting only the Spanish residents. He gave us five days to get out of the city, and if we did not, he would shoot us like dogs. That happened last Tuesday. The day after looting started with El Nuevo Mundo, a local Spanish merchant, had his right car cut in half, and also a small cash almost the entire length of his right cheek. He was the only one wounded before the battle had been stopped by military police."

The police blame the affair on the sympathizers of Villa, saying that the wounded man made some derogatory remark about Villa which was objected to. The freedom of fight then started. Some of the Spanish refugees are said to have been participants.

The arrival of the police probably saved the refugees from serious injury at the hands of the apparently infuriated Spaniards.

After being taken to the police station, Kyrieopolis was turned over to judge James J. Murphy. A complaint was filed in Murphy's court charging that the assault on Kyrieopolis was a conspiracy to defraud the bank, which was fixed at $200, which he furnished.

Huerta says he can put 1,000 Mexican in field.

Mexico City, Mex., Dec. 15.—That he could immediately put a force of more than 1,000,000 armed men in the field, is the statement of president Huerta, in replying to a letter sent him from the correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung.

"Without counting the 150,000 men of the national army, the government, in agreement with various states of the republic, has organized an armed force for the local defense of each state. Also the government has arranged with 52,000 ranch owners that they keep ten armed workmen each for their own protection."

"Thus the government counts upon a number of armed men of seven hundred each, for a total of 364,000. The consideration of the rebels that they could be organized if the peace of the country was threatened is thus disturbed."

An appeal by El Paso business and professional men to secretary of state W. J. Bryan, senator Morris Sheppard and congressmen W. R. Smith and John Garner, was telegraphed Sunday night in an effort to save Luis Terrazas, Jr., from being executed by the rebels of Chihuahua.

The message called attention to the statement that young Terrazas was taken from the British consulate by the rebels and was in danger of being executed, while the women members of the Terrazas family were being held. The message also said that the Spanish and Mexican men left Chihuahua as refugees with the belief that their women would be permitted to follow them. This, the message says, was denied the women.

"The signers of the telegram appreciate the conditions in Mexico," the telegram to secretary Bryan reads, "and now, as in the past, have endeavored to remain neutral, and same is not sent in the name of any faction, but for the sake of humanity."

A reply was received by John L. Dyer to the message which was sent to congressmen Garner. This message said secretary Bryan was fully advised as to conditions in Chihuahua and was doing everything possible to aid the refugees.

Those who signed the telegrams which were sent to Washington were: W. M. Waidath, M. Jackson and M. Nagle, district judges; James R. Harper, chief justice of the court of appeals; Claude B. Penqueira, confidential agent of the United States government, made the following statement today: "The Herald correspondent: 'Gen. Villa is charged in the dispatches with expropriating the property of Spaniards, and with confiscation of their property. He is charged with looting a church of its treasure.'"

"General Villa is proceeding within his rights; he is committing no wanton destruction, but is protecting the property of neutral foreigners, which many of the Spaniards are not. Practically all the movable and immovable property in Villa and have faith in him and subsequent developments will justify their attitude."

CHINA ASKS U. S. TO AID IN CHECKING FLOODS IN HONAN

Pekin, China, Dec. 15.—To check floods in the province of Honan, the Chinese government has appealed to the United States for aid. The rivers overflow every year and cost many lives and millions of dollars.

Three years ago the Red Cross sent Chas. D. Jameson, an American engineer, to devise a plan to keep the river within its banks. It is to carry out Jameson's plan that the Chinese government desires assistance. The work will cost about $20,000,000, which the government proposes to raise by concessions of the vast area of reclaimed land.

American minister Reisch has sent details of the plan to Washington with the hope that American financiers could be found to undertake it.
